Qual o uso de cada um dos dois? A: Para responder a sua pergunta há que saber o que está fazendo. Tanto a div interna quanto a div externa que o googlechart não formata nenhuma de uma certa forma. O responsável pelo seu design é que não formata, quando ele faz com que a página fique bem bonitinha. Por exemplo, vamos considerar o formato aqui: O que temos: Como são várias páginas, teremos que construir algo externo para agrupar as páginas de maneira que eles se encaixem. Para fazer isso, eu criei uma div interna (especificando position:absolute) no meio do contêiner: Ao passar o scroll para a "página", o elemento abaixo vai descer como se fosse uma div externa, dando-a uma colarinha dentro do espaço que separa essa div de outra para que cada div interna possa ser removida e exibida por partes (mas não sem que existam outros divs no cenário). Enfim, para fazer sua div de páginas ficar "em um", basta incluir um "container div" e aplicar um width e height específicos como o exemplo abaixo (colocando o googlechart dentro):

By this We can understand the wiringLearn Some of our most important work is happening at the grassroots level: women and girls are taking the lead on health issues as they take care of themselves and their families. They are the first to experience the effects of global health issues. They are also the first to grasp the power of solutions that can empower them to change the future for generations. One of the most important steps to take is to ensure that women have full access to the health care they deserve. We are working with communities in places where there's not enough health care, and we are discovering that community organizations are among the most important partners in efforts to improve the health of women and children.

Q: Why is the constructor of the class with a null pointer held in a reference variable?
