This move was designed to bring attention to racial injustice in the United States, particularly those committed by the U.S. police force against African Americans. 2016 season protests After the 2016 season, national anthem protests were still in place. The protests were not as widespread as the previous season, but some football players joined the protest. For example, Broncos cornerback Aqib Talib, a Muslim, knelt during the national anthem in 2016. 2017 season protests The ongoing kneeling protests in 2017 have been more prominent in games televised nationally, particularly on Sundays and Mondays, than they were in the 2016 season, which was still ongoing. As of week 4 of the 2017 NFL season, the Houston Texans and the Cleveland Browns were the only two teams to have not issued any statements concerning the protests. Controversies Officiating Two players from the Baltimore Ravens, IK Enemkpali and Steve Smith, were ejected during the 2017 game against the New England Patriots after they refused to stand for the anthem.
